(Foreign Policy Concept of Russia 2013).[50] International relations became more complex and unpredictable, and the Western world's ability to dominate world affairs seems to be diminishing like never before. The global power and development potential is now more scattered and shifting toward the East, particularly Asia–Pacific. Thus, the emergence of new global economic and political actors led to the competition between these two actors and made world affairs plunge into instability in international relations (ibid.).[51]

During the Fortaleza BRICS summit held on July 9, 2014, Russian President Putin requested other members establish a virtual secretariat for the BRICS group to intensify interaction among the group members and the public to access more information regarding the BRICS group. That is why Russia is stepping up its efforts to make BRICS a political entity (Putin 2014).[52] Before starting the 2015 Ufa BRICS Summit, Putin, by giving an interview to Itar-Tass (2015), said that the BRICS association working on a joint declaration on the Syrian conflict and Afghanistan, Iran's nuclear program and situation prevailed in the Middle East and on other issues too. He spoke that the group would become a mere dialogue forum to a full-scale strategic cooperation mechanism to look for critical political global problems (Putin 2015).[53] Furthermore, the changing scenario in international relations and growing bonding within the BRICS group in multiple areas would be paved the way for faster solutions. However, Putin has specific goals to make BRICS a decisive group. Lo (2015) said that Putin has three options in the present world political scenario. They are,

- To facilitate an external environment that supports the stability of Putin's regime.
- To secure international respect, if not support, to acquire Moscow's interests in the post-Soviet neighborhood. And
- To promote Russia as one of the world's leading powers while retaining strategic flexibility.

Furthermore, for this to realize, Putin has to maintain a strategic balance with all the group members. The group's future depended on how well the bilateral skirmishes would be resolved. Remarkably, China and India's frequent frictions have the central block that BRICS has to strengthen its relations for greater cooperation in international relations. The group's institutional establishment would be the best idea to resolve and make