come to an end, and BRICS got into this geopolitical trap (Metzel 2014). So, to be healthy, BRICS started focusing on political strength and Military might over some time.

From Economic to Security Cooperation at BRICS

Therefore, the question that arises here is what is the future of this trend? Does BRICS have the capacity to build a security organization to balance out its stand on global issues? However, specific global political changes reason out that BRICS might go for securitization of its group. The group countries have been rapidly increasing their UN peacekeeping forces recently, and India is the most significant contributor at present. The data below shows the UN peacekeeping forces from BRICS countries (October 31, 2013) (Table 5.2).

Table 5.2 UN peacekeeping forces

Country	Police	Experts	Military	Total
India	1001	51	6812	7864
South Africa	61	20	2120	2201
China	172	37	1710	1919
Brazil	11	24	1676	1711
Russia	38	62	5	105
BRICS countries	1283	194	12,323	13,800
All countries	12,811	1899	83,611	98,321

Source U.N.

According to the table, BRICS countries' share in the UN peacekeeping forces has gradually increased, whereas the Western country's percentage is slowly decreasing. In the table of 2013, BRICS countries' share in the UN Police forces had 1283 personnel, experts had 194 personnel, the Military had 12,323 personnel, and the total was 13,000 personnel. Likewise, other countries' share in the UN Peacekeeping forces in the police was 12,811, personnel, experts were 1899 personnel, Military was 83,611 personnel, and