School of thought	(Neo)realist-declinists, e.g., Waltz	(Neo)realists hegemonists, e.g., Wohlforth	Neoliberals, e.g., Lebow, Kegley, etc
What is the probability of the birth of a multipolar system?	Very high	Not probable in the near future	Probable
What is the probability of multipolarity systems	Unstable	Unstable	Dependence on circumstance
What is the probability of stability in a bipolar system	Most stable	Stable	Depends on circumstances
What is the probability of stability in a unipolar system?	Extremely unstable	Most stable	Depends on circumstance
What is the polarity of the current international system?	Bipolarity, but shifting rapidly toward multipolarity	Unipolar, but it will remain so for a long time. However, it is changing its stand with China, India, Brazil, and other nations in global political and economic affairs	Unipolar. However, the multipolar world prevailed in world politics with the increasing economic strength and political strength of rising power nations

Source Petr Kratochvil (2002), 'Multipolarity: American Theory and Russian Practice'
Note The author's analysis is included in the table

The concept of multipolarity became popular during Primakov's term in the foreign ministry from 1996 to 1998 and during his prime ministerial term from 1998 to 1999. However, it gained momentum after the Kosovo incident.[11] Indeed, it got legitimacy and was backed by substantial financial support under Putin's presidency. The foreign policy concept adopted by the Russian Federation in July 2008 asserted that multipolarity is an emerging trend in world affairs (Makarychev and Morozov 2011). And also, both the scholars Makarychev and Morozov (2011) synthesized Russian discourse on multipolarity. And they have made two distinctive components. One is that multipolarity is based on global interests and normative strategies. The second is state-centric and beyond the state, involving a wider gamut of participants.

Traditionally, Western scholars ignored the concept of multipolarity, and scholars like Morgenthau, Waltz, and Wolfforth went further on and said that it is a non-peace provider. Makarychev and Morozov (2011) observed that emerging international relations are a new pattern within the multipolarity discourse in world affairs as an alternative to Western hegemony. Kremlin believes that promoting