shared values of peace, freedom, and the rule of law, respect for human rights, and democracy made all nations come together. The BRICS group aimed at for building a more fair, just, inclusive, equitable, and representative multipolar international system are the common, based on international law and the UN Charter, respect for their territorial integrity and mutual respect will help in building a better place for all the BRICS members. That is how the BRICS is committed to reform for the UN architecture, fighting for international peace and security, making the international financial architecture more inclusive, changing the rigidities of global trade and development, and facing global health issues together.[16]

BRICS symbolizes the stand taken together by these two countries over the Arab crisis (Libya crisis and the Syria crisis), the Ukraine crisis, the energy cooperation. It made other BRICS countries take a collective stand during the BRICS annual summit (Burges 2011; Sweig 2014; Stuenkel 2012; Panova 2014). Gleb Ivashentsov, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary, Deputy Director of Russian APEC[17] study center, while giving an interview to Russia's Direct Journal on July 8, 2015, said that BRICS tackles not only economic issues but also geopolitical ones. Though BRICS countries do not accept the pressure coming from the West over their economic and political issues, that does not mean that the BRICS does not build its own economic and political alliance against the West. That is how BRICS has called for making a polycentric and more democratic, fair, and safe world. Specifically, in every BRICS summit, there comes one vision and many issues, which have been explained in the following passages. Then what is the role and objective of the BRICS in present-day international relations?

Reform of the present international relations structure is the fundamental objective behind the creation of BRICS. In each of the BRICS summits, declarations called for reform of the global institutional system of world politics. BRICS believes in a lack of democracy in international institutional representation and the membership and global decision-making process. BRICS wants to change with active cooperation from the global north and global south. BRICS regards that the changes occurring in present international relations should be given space for somewhat neglected and less developed countries in the global decision-making process.

BRICS frequently mentions that the time has come to realize the importance of the global south in international relations. Whether the country is poor or rich, weak or powerful, there should be an equal say in any international relations decision-making process. Indeed, Fig. 2.6 shows how BRICS is using international organizations in their meetings and consultation in the process of calling them to create a reform filled with a democratic representative of global institutions. Larionova wrote it in 2012, where he mentioned how often BRICS countries had
