and a nostalgic anchor. The living room transitions seamlessly into the dining area, where a live-edge wooden table brings a sense of raw nature indoors. We paired this with woven cane-back chairs for added texture and suspended rust-orange glazed terracotta pendants overhead to cast an earthy glow during family meals. To give the family flexibility, we installed panelled pocket doors that open from the dining space into the kitchen and entrance foyer, allowing the entire layout to shift effortlessly between expansive openness and quiet privacy.

Scale and Repose

Moving deeper into the private quarters, we designed each bedroom to evoke a distinct emotional response while maintaining the home's tactile, material-led vocabulary. In the guest bedroom, versatility took priority; we installed a custom Murphy bed that easily folds away to clear the floor for daily exercise, alongside an ergonomic study desk with curved edges. For the mother's bedroom, we wanted a deeply restorative atmosphere, anchoring the space with a nature-inspired mural painted by artist Chandani Advani. Framed within elegant arched panelling, the delicate strokes of blooming florals and birds create the illusion of an adjacent garden wandering inside, grounded by a soft blush-terracotta upholstered headboard.

The daughter's bedroom was built to inspire optimism and independence, utilising a cheerful palette of muted
