At the Nitte Mahalinga Adyanthaya Memorial Institute of Technology (NMAMIT), industry linkages are a vital pillar of the learning process. These collaborations happen at different levels, beginning with curriculum development and extending to laboratories, internships, research publications and placements. The institute currently has 49 MoUs covering various dimensions of academic and industry engagement, with more than 300 companies visiting the campus every year for placements. This rise in stature is reflected in its substantial increase in rankings since 2022, from No. 128 to No. 68.

Each department has an industry advisory board whose inputs are considered at regular intervals for the development of the department, says Prof. Niranjan N. Chiplunkar, principal. Similarly, suggestions from industry representatives on the Board of Studies are factored into curriculum revision, ensuring that academic programmes remain aligned with changing industry expectations.

"Over the last 40 years, we have been expanding on all fronts, not only in terms of student strength but also infrastructure, research facilities, publications and placements," says Chiplunkar. In 2025, the institute's intake, which has been growing since inception, reached a peak of 1,839 new student admissions. The admission process for the current year is underway and, going by the trends, is expected to surpass the previous year's count, he adds. ■
