A BUSINESS CLASS ACT

Shaheed Sukhdev College of Business Studies retains its top spot by blending AI, finance and experiential learning to shape tomorrow's business leaders

By SHELLY ANAND

Business today cuts across disciplines; business education should do the same. With that in view, Shaheed Sukhdev College of Business Studies (SSCBS), University of Delhi, is building an academic ecosystem where management, technology, finance, data science and public policy converge—because that is precisely the world its graduates will enter.

Underpinning this is a comprehensive curriculum revision aligned with the National Education Policy 2020. This year, artificial intelligence literacy, data-driven decision-making and technology-enabled business thinking will be integrated across all disciplines. The college will also introduce a suite of specialised short-duration programmes in financial modelling, quantitative finance, generative AI, agentic AI, fintech, embedded finance and social finance.

The college will replace passive learning with active learning wherever possible. Flipped classrooms, simulation-based exercises, Harvard-style case discussions, live consulting projects and industry-integrated assignments will replace rote instruction. AI-enabled learning tools will be incorporated to personalise academic pathways, sharpen feedback loops and strengthen decision-making under

"We produce graduates who are ready to lead. At SSCBS, the benchmark is not whether students are good enough to be hired, but whether they can make a meaningful difference"
