real constraints. Internal assessments will shift decisively towards application through mock trading floors, live valuation projects, strategy simulations and real-world problem-solving.

A campus should be an active instrument of education. With that in mind, smart classrooms, upgraded computing labs and seamless campus-wide connectivity are being rolled out to create an environment where advanced learning, research and analytical thinking can happen without friction. One of the most exciting new additions will be an AI-enabled podcast and media studio.

This year, the college will double down on pre-placement offer (PPO) opportunities, converting the best internships into full-time offers before students even graduate. Along with that, it will launch an alumni-led return-to-campus series for structured conversations between its students and accomplished SSCBS graduates.

The future of business education lies at the intersection of management, technology and data. SSCBS is redesigning its curriculum to reflect that shift. ■
