private engineering colleges for fairer comparison, and introduced return-on-investment rankings to help students and parents make practical choices. It now maps excellence by city and zone, ranks colleges by subject performance in arts and science, and identifies emerging institutions set up after 2000 so that they are measured fairly against legacy campuses. By tracking annual movement, recognising the biggest one-year leaps and, most recently, honouring the most improved colleges over a five-year period, the survey captures not just where institutions stand, but how
