Hindu College holds on to the No. 1 position through a pioneering public policy programme, expanding research opportunities and global engagement

By SHELLY ANAND

Among the most exciting developments at Hindu College is the creation of interdisciplinary learning ecosystems that bring together policy, technology, global engagement, research, leadership and social impact.

A case in point is the Public Policy in Action (PPIA) programme, anchored in India's first undergraduate-focused Public Policy Lab, launched in 2025 with support from the Indian Railway Finance Corporation and Hindustan Steelworks Construction Ltd. Combining classroom learning with policy simulations, case studies, field immersion and an eight-week paid internship, the programme enables students to engage with real-world governance and development challenges.

What makes Hindu College particularly distinctive is the growing integra-
