A RETURN TO ROOTS: TOURISM AS A REDISCOVERY OF BHARAT

GAJENDRA SINGH SHEKHAWAT, Union Minister of Tourism and Culture

Nowadays, especially post-COVID, the perspective towards life has changed. Today's generation—people below 50 years of age—is giving priority to experience-led tourism. So, we have started incentivising and hand-holding the states to create new experiences in the bouquet of tourism products

Hon'ble PM Narendra Modi has envisaged that we create 50 new iconic destinations of global standard... To enhance the overall experience of travellers, we have now started working proactively with the states to establish destination management authorities to address the issues that come between tourism and tourists

Bastar is going to be the new destination. It used to be known for guns, bullets and Naxalism. Sitting here today, I can say: if you have not seen Bastar, you have not seen India. It is so beautiful, so green and so fascinating... Today, it is open, and I am sure this will give a fresh boost to the tourism industry
