STUDENTSPEAK

“At SRCC, learning went far beyond classrooms. Conversations with peers, faculty and alumni widened my perspective and built the confidence, resilience and grit to face the future”

Entrepreneurship. “The spirit of NEP 2020 is encouraging Indian higher education to move from asking ‘What should students know?’ to asking ‘What kind of individuals should students become?’” says Simrit Kaur, principal of SRCC.

Research is another focus area, with colleges increasingly encouraging students to participate in research projects, policy studies and field-based investigations. SRCC has strengthened its student research journal, Strides, while its Business Analyst Journal was recently included in the Australian Business Deans Council’s 2025 Journal Quality List.

Technology is becoming more visible as well. The college is investing in smart classrooms and emerging technologies. One initiative planned for 2026-27 is a one-year programme with professional services firm EY, focused on artificial intelligence and its applications in industry.

Outside academics, student life at SRCC is enlivened by its many societies and events. These spaces provide opportunities for leadership, teamwork, public speaking and entrepreneurship that complement classroom learning. Through its alumni network, which connects over 20,000 people across the world, students are able to interact with professionals from a wide range of fields. Alumni talks, podcasts and networking events are a regular feature of campus life.

Students arriving in 2026 will be entering an institution with a century of history, but one that is also experimenting with new ways of teaching, learning and preparing students for a rapidly evolving world. ■
