STUDENTSPEAK

"I have had so much time and attention from my teachers which has made learning more impactful. The clinical exposure at this college is the best and has taught me a lifetime of skills"

AANVI YADAV
BDS, Fourth year

students can work on projects that address real healthcare challenges. At a time when India is pushing for indigenous healthcare innovation, MAIDS is enabling young dentists to move from being consumers of technology to contributors to it.

One such example is the institute's growing innovation ecosystem. MAIDS is home to India's first Dental Technology Innovation Hub, established with support from the Department of Science and Technology and ICMR. The hub is focused on developing indigenous dental technologies and reducing dependence on imported products, giving students a chance to engage with real-world innovation and product development.
