BIHAR

DRIVING THE NEXT PHASE OF GROWTH

The first hundred days of the Samrat Government dispensation have catapulted Bihar's development journey into a high-velocity phase, advancing Prime Minister Narendra Modi's vision of states as engines of national progress.

"Bihar – the land of Nalanda, Chanakya, and Ashoka – is rising again. Let's unite beyond caste and creed to build a strong, self-reliant, and proud Bihar. The time to reclaim our glory is now."

A New Chapter Driven by Reform, Investment and Opportunity

On April 15, 2026, Bihar entered a new political chapter as Samrat Choudhary took oath as the state's 24th Chief Minister at Lok Bhavan in Patna, becoming the first Bharatiya Janata Party leader to assume the state's top executive office. His appointment naturally raised expectations across the state and the nation of advancing Prime Minister Narendra Modi's vision of states no longer serving as passive recipients of Central policies, but as active engines of national growth, driven by a comprehensive "whole-of-government" approach.

Within hours of taking office, Chief Minister Choudhary began work on this broader agenda, calling for faster execution of projects, zero tolerance for corruption, quicker decision-making, efficient public service delivery, and seamless coordination across departments. He reassured both citizens and alliance partners that Bihar's development journey would continue on familiar lines, declaring, "Bihar mein Narendra Modi ji aur Nitish Kumar ji ka model hi chalne wala hai." The message was clear: continuity would remain the foundation of governance, but it would be complemented by greater urgency, sharper accountability, and stronger inter-departmental coordination—breaking down bureaucratic silos to transform Bihar into a leading contributor to India's global aspirations.

The first hundred days of the double engine government have reflected that intent. From taking governance to the doorstep of citizens through Sahyog Shivir and accelerating industrial investment, to strengthening tourism, expanding infrastructure, embracing clean energy, modernising agriculture and preparing Bihar for the digital economy, the administration has pursued development across multiple fronts.

These initiatives are not isolated announcements. Together, they present a broader vision of a state seeking to improve public services, attract investment, generate employment and build modern infrastructure while ensuring that the benefits of growth reach every section of society. The journey is still in its early stages. Yet the pace, scale and diversity of decisions taken during these first hundred days offer a glimpse into the government's priorities and its ambition to position Bihar as a stronger contributor to the national goal of Viksit Bharat by 2047.

Sahyog Shivir: Bringing Governance Closer to the People

Good governance is often measured by how easily citizens can access it. In Bihar, the Sahyog Shivir initiative is attempting to bridge the gap between the administration and the people by taking government services directly to villages.

Held on the first and third Tuesdays of every month, these camps function at both the state and panchayat levels, offering a decentralised platform for grievance redressal. Citizens no longer need to spend months navigating government offices for issues such as land disputes, ration cards, pensions or caste certificates. Instead, many of these matters are resolved on the spot.

For more complex legal or administrative cases, Chief Minister Samrat Choudhary personally participates in the camps, reinforcing the government's commitment to accountability at the grassroots.
