

To ensure timely action, grievances must be resolved within 30 days. Officials receive reminders on the tenth, twentieth and twenty fifth days, while failure to act by the thirty first day results in automatic suspension. The system places equal emphasis on responsiveness and accountability.

The initiative has already begun changing perceptions of public service delivery.

Rameshwar Mahto, a farmer from Vaishali, had spent fourteen months trying to correct his land records before his case was resolved digitally within hours at a Sahyog Shivir. Building an Investment Friendly Bihar: Creating Jobs Through Industry and Enterprise

Alongside governance reforms, Bihar has placed economic growth at the centre of its development agenda through policies designed to attract investment while encouraging local entrepreneurship.

A major reform has been the restructuring of the State Investment Promotion Board into a legally empowered Single Nodal Agency that must process industrial clearances within 30 days. If a department fails to act within the stipulated period, investors receive deemed clearance, allowing projects to proceed without procedural delays. The government has complemented this reform with the Bihar First Procurement Shield. Under the policy, public procurement and civil works worth up to ₹50 crore will give preference to local firms where at least 51 per cent of the shareholding is held by permanent residents of Bihar. The objective is to retain capital within the state, strengthen local businesses and move towards the long term goal of creating one crore jobs.

The policy has already translated into investment on the ground. Among the major approvals are a 960 MTPD par boiled rice production unit in Nalanda with an investment of ₹88.18 crore and a 60 KLPD ethanol plant in Kaimur worth ₹73.45 crore.

These are part of a wider industrial push during the government's first hundred days. Thirty approved projects are expected to generate more than 3,300 jobs, while another twenty nine projects are projected to create nearly 3,000 additional employment opportunities, signalling growing investor confidence in Bihar's changing business environment.
