The company sits at the centre of one of India's largest digital ecosystems, spanning telecom connectivity through Reliance Jio, entertainment platforms such as JioCinema and JioSaavn, online retail via JioMart, digital payments through JioPayments Bank and JioPay, as well as enterprise solutions and 5G technology for businesses and telecom operators.

The NSE, meanwhile, will offer 6 per cent of its equity to the public through the sale of 148.9 million shares. The issue is expected to raise about Rs 30,000 crore and value India's largest multi-asset exchange at around Rs 5.4 lakh crore. Both offerings will comfortably surpass earlier record-breaking IPOs, including Hyundai Motor India's Rs 27,870 crore issue in 2024 and LIC's Rs 21,000 crore offering in 2022 (see India's Biggest IPOs So Far).

The two IPOs, however, differ fundamentally in structure. Jio Platforms is launching a primary issue, creating new shares to raise capital for the company's expansion. The NSE's listing is an Offer for Sale (OFS), under which existing shareholders sell part of their holdings, allowing them to monetise their investments. Among the NSE's largest shareholders are LIC, with a 10.7 per cent stake, Mauritius-based Aranda Investments (4.5 per cent), Stock Holding Corporation of India (4.4 per cent), SBI Capital Markets (4.3 per cent), State Bank of India (3.2 per cent) and General Insurance Corporation of India (1.6 per cent). Businessman Radhakishan Damani, promoter of the DMart retail chain, is the largest individual shareholder with about 1.58 per cent. Reliance Industries Ltd (RIL), by contrast, owns 66.43 per cent of Jio Platforms. The remaining 33.57 per cent is held by a roster of global investors, including Meta (9.98 per cent), Google (7.73 per cent), sovereign wealth funds and private equity firms.

Speaking at the RIL annual general meeting on June 19, chairman Mukesh Ambani described the IPO as an emotional milestone for both him and his family. "The relationship Reliance shares with its shareholders is a deep and sacred relationship founded on pride, trust, respect and shared growth," he said, adding that his children—Akash, Isha and Anant—are leading the Jio IPO process.

MORE THAN FUNDRAISING

Beyond the fundraising itself, the two listings could reshape India's capital markets. A successful Jio listing would establish a transparent public-market valuation for RIL's digital assets and provide an important benchmark for India's rapidly expanding digital and AI economy, potentially encouraging more technology companies and startups to tap public markets. The NSE listing carries significance of a different kind. As one of the world's largest derivatives exchanges by contracts traded, its long-awaited public debut is expected to deepen governance, improve transparency and broaden public ownership of an institution that sits at the heart of India's financial markets.

The timing could also prove consequential. After a relatively subdued first half of 2026, the two mega listings are widely seen as bellwethers for the broader IPO market. If successful, they could trigger a fresh wave of large offerings that have been deferred amid global volatility. Listings of this scale also deepen market liquidity, attract sizeable global institutional allocations and reinforce India's standing as a mature financial market.
