▼ TILL SEPT. 12 | Gallery Threshold, New Delhi

Abandoned

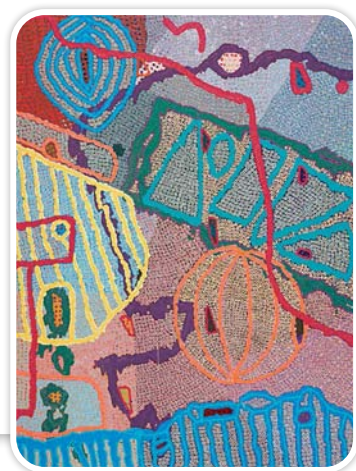

This is the final body of work by celebrated sculptor Latika Katt (1948-2025). Created between 2023 and 2025, the exhibition centres on her last sculptural series, where bronze forms are embedded within stone to evoke archaeological relics, forgotten architecture and traces of time, reflecting her lifelong fascination with decay and materiality.

▼ TILL AUG. 21 | Art Explore, New Delhi

Inward

Inward marks Harpreet Narula's first solo exhibition, presenting abstract paintings inspired by the painted walls of Rajasthan and Punjab, textile design and the meditative power of repetition. Curated by Vikram Singh, the exhibition reflects the artist's transition from a textile designer to painter.

The Meenakshi Amman Temple in Madurai clicked by Linnaeus Tripe in 1858

EXHIBITION ▼

Beyond the Image

At Mumbai's Dr Bhau Daji Lad Museum, early photographs reveal how India's architectural history and heritage were framed

In collaboration with DAG, Histories in the Making at Dr Bhau Daji Lad Museum revisits a period when the camera emerged as an instrument of documentation, scholarship and discovery. Curated by Dr Sudeshna Guha, former curatorial manager and research associate of the photographic collections at the Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology, University of Cambridge, the exhibition presents nearly 100 photographs taken between 1855 and 1920. Negatives, prints and archival material also offer a broader view of the evolution of photography in colonial India.

In the mid-1850s, the Bombay Presidency commissioned the photographic documentation of India's architectural heritage. Thomas Biggs, followed by William Pigou and Andrew Neill, were the first photographers, capturing everything from the Durga Temple in Bijapur and Rani Rupamati's Mosque in Ahmedabad to the Chamundi Temple in Mysore; the striking Idol car at the temple of Chamondee (1856) is on display. War and travel photographer, Felice Beato came to India in 1858 to record the aftermath of the Uprising of 1857. One of his photographs from Lucknow on display: 'The Place in which General Neil was killed in the China Bazar' (1858). The exhibition reveals that photography was never a neutral medium, playing a central role in the colonial production of historical knowledge.

The exhibition also spotlights Indian photographers, whose work offers perspectives that complicate narratives of colonial visual culture. These include Lala Deen Dayal, the best-known Indian photographer of the 19th century, whose photographs of the Sanchi Stupa, Ajanta Caves and the palaces of Jaipur and Udaipur feature in this exhibition. Also noteworthy are Narayan Virkar's compositions of Raigad Fort that convey the sheer force of Maratha architecture. ■

—Prachi Joshi

The exhibition reveals that photography was never a neutral medium, playing a central role in the colonial production of historical knowledge

The exhibition is on till Aug. 25