

MEXICO CITY

Food Haul

An omakase with tacos shouldn't come as a surprise—you're in Mexico City after all. One of the most iconic places for this experience is Pujol, a two-Michelin-star restaurant that serves creative, gourmet interpretations of the popular Mexican street food. In fact, many travellers book a table along with their flight tickets. This is just one of the culinary highlights in Mexico, a city now known as one of the world's most exciting food destinations with 11 Michelin-star restaurants.

Daring diners can opt for dishes that incorporate ingredients like grasshoppers and chicatana ants at the two-Michelin-star restaurant, Quintonil. But it isn't all shock and awe; weaving traditional flavours into modern preparations, the restaurant has been feted for pushing the boundaries of Mexican cuisine.

https://quintonil.com/; https://www.pujol.com.mx/en
The Omakase costs $4,500 MXN (approx. ₹24,000)

Guadalajara

Tequila's chic makeover is not new. After the football match in Guadalajara, explore Jalisco, the birthplace of tequila to understand the Mexican spirit's heritage. A newly launched experience, the Los Altos del Tequila Route, weaves through blue agave fields and historic distilleries across eight municipalities for a deep dive into tequila's lifecycle, from plant to pour.

Another exciting experience awaits at La Hacienda, the sprawling 50-acre estate of tequila's most luxurious brand, Clase Azul. Against a backdrop of landscaped agave fields, the visitor centre provides a deep dive into how this spirit is produced. Opt for the seven-hour experience which includes an exploration of the distillery, a visit to the ceramics centre which crafts the brand's iconic hand painted decanters, guided tastings and a lavish six-course meal.

https://claseazul.com/
The 7-hour experience is for $10,200 MXN per person (approx. ₹55,000)

