

Q. If you do not want to engage in sexual activity, how do you typically respond to your partner?

- I clearly say 'no'
- I give hints or excuses rather than directly refusing
- I go along with it even though I feel uncomfortable
- I agree to avoid conflict, awkwardness, or guilt
- I sometimes change my mind later and regret agreeing
- I don't have/haven't had a partner

Q. How does your partner generally react if you refuse physical intimacy or set a boundary?

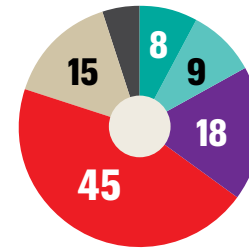

- Respects it immediately with understanding
- Tries to persuade or pressurise me to change my mind
- Gets upset or complains that I am being unfair or 'difficult'
- I have never needed to refuse or set a boundary with a partner
- I don't have/haven't had a partner

Q. What areas out of the following do you think the concept of 'my body, my rules' covers?

(Multiple responses; figures are those who picked each option)

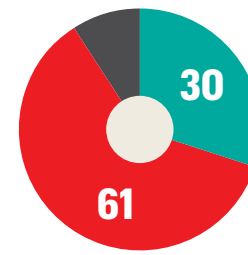

Clothing & appearances	57
Lifestyle choices	51
Relationships & sexual choices	45
Health-related decisions	43
Reproductive decisions	41
I don't agree with this concept	7

Q. Have you ever felt pressured to 'consent' to physical affection—like kissing or touching on dates to meet expectations or avoid seeming prudish?

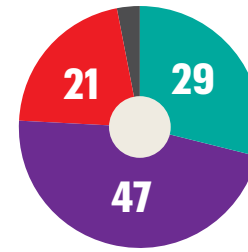

- Always
- Often
- Sometimes
- No, never
- Do not go/never been on dates

Q. How do people around you generally view a woman who openly expresses her sexual needs, or initiates sex?

- Seen as normal and confident
- Seen as 'not of good character'

Q. In general, do you think women's wishes and consent are respected in Indian society today?

- Mostly respected
- Sometimes respected
- Not respected at all

Rest, DK/ CS; all figures in %