COLLECTOR'S EDITION

Making Waves

What makes a sparkler rise and shine to the occasion? When it serves a cause, of course. Although Chopard's Happy Fish bracelet, unveiled in support of the Prince Albert II of Monaco Foundation—committed to protecting the oceans and marine biodiversity—sates the soul, it's definitely a sight for sore eyes too. The bold confection, imagined by Caroline Scheufele, holds true to the free spirit of the iconic Happy Diamonds with an 18-carat ethical rose gold bangle, which opens onto two delicate circular motifs set with diamonds. At the heart of one of them is a mobile fish in gold and diamonds that dances to the movement of the wrist, when released from all constraints. The shimmering fish captures the changing light effortlessly, in a graceful nod to the Maison's signature. The bracelet is Scheufele's homage to the richness and fragility of marine ecosystems. Save their fate; savour the design and serve the cause.

Price on request; Availability chopard.com

By Chumki Bharadwaj

