

THE CHAIRMAN
(NO 1 ON ASIA'S 50 BEST LIST; 1 MICHELIN STAR)

Tucked away in the stylish Gough Street enclave, The Chairman is where modern minimalism meets Cantonese heritage; a culinary yin-yang that hums with quiet confidence. A Michelin darling and foodie pilgrimage site, it's packed tighter than dim sum baskets every night with locals, gourmands, and the occasional culinary icon (yes, Bourdain's been here). Reservations require military precision, two weeks for lunch, and a month for dinner. What sets it apart? The Chairman isn't flashy, nor does it crackle with cocktail chatter, a rarity in a world where theatrics often overshadow taste. Instead, this is a place where the ingredients are the story. The 20 year aged lemon peels tucked into razor clams add a Shakespearean twist of citrus. Flower crab drenched in Shaoxing wine, fragrant and impossibly tender, spare ribs lacquered in black vinegar and preserved plums that balance sweetness with sharp nostalgia The kitchen is almost monk-like in its devotion to craft. Head Chef Kwok Keung Tung who works closely with iconic Chef Danny Yip, ensures, sauces, vegetables, and livestock toe the 'locally sourced' line expertly. Upscale yet humble, The Chairman eschews the drama of gimmickry, letting the food's complexity whisper louder than words.

USP

Nostalgic Cantonese dishes elevated by local ingredients and obsessive craftsmanship

WHERE
3rd Floor, The Wellington, 198 Wellington Street, Central

COST
Tasting menus: Upwards of ₹11,000 per person

WEB
http://www.thechairmangroup.com

Clockwise from top: Smoked Camphor Goose at The Chairman; Thick cut Chairman style Char siu; Steamed fresh flowery crab with aged Shaoxing wine, fragrant chicken oil and flat rice noodles; Chef Danny Yip; Inside The Chairman