Cosmograph Daytona Rolesium Ref. 126502

Rolex rarely does plot twists, which is why the Daytona 126502 lands like a champagne cork in the paddock. Its 40 mm Oystersteel case is trimmed with platinum, while a milky grand feu enamel dial and anthracite Cerachrom bezel turn the familiar racing face almost patrician. Through the first sapphire back on a predominantly steel Daytona, calibre 4131 displays its gold rotor and 72-hour reserve. The platinum is deliberately hard to spot, a private joke at a very public price. Off-catalogue and allocation-only, this is not a democratic sports watch. It is Rolex making scarcity look unusually serene, and the Daytona has rarely appeared more self-assured or more destined for the safe.
