

TUXEDO TIMING

Omega

Speedmaster Professional Moonwatch Black & White

Omega's Moonwatch has survived vacuum chambers, lunar dust and decades of collector sermons, yet a tuxedo may be its most natural 2026 habitat. The new Black & White flips the familiar palette with a lacquered black step dial and crisp white counters, a reverse-panda arrangement that makes the 42 mm icon look unusually dressed up. Steel is the sharper choice, while Moonshine Gold turns restraint into a technicality. Both keep the hand-wound Master Chronometer calibre 3861, sapphire sandwich construction and ceramic tachymeter bezel. Nothing revolutionary happened here, and that is precisely the pleasure. Omega has given its most over-explained watch a visual edit anyone can understand from across the room.
