MODERN MONARCH

Tudor

Monarch

For its centenary, Tudor has resisted the easy temptation to produce another commemorative dive watch. Instead, it revives the Monarch name in an entirely new form, drawing upon the brand's earliest visual language. The papyrus-toned dial employs an "Error-Proof" arrangement, with Roman numerals above and Arabic numerals below, while small seconds and subtly snowflake-shaped hands add personality. Its sharply faceted 39mm steel case and bracelet feel more ambitious than Tudor's usual tool-watch territory. Visible through the caseback, calibre MT5662-2U carries COSC and METAS certification, resists magnetic fields of 15,000 gauss and offers 65 hours of power. It is Tudor history rewritten with considerably better finishing.

MEASURED PURITY

Parmigiani Fleurier

Toric Petite Seconde Platinum Anniversaire

Parmigiani Fleurier marks 30 years by returning to the Toric, the collection that has expressed Michel Parmigiani's classical vision since 1996. The platinum case retains its finely knurled bezel, while a hand-hammered white-gold dial in Morning Blue gives the restrained design a living texture. Manual calibre PF780-AN is the true indulgence, pairing solid rose-gold bridges with double hand-guilloché, small seconds and a 60-hour reserve. Limited to 30 pieces, it achieves minimalism through an almost unreasonable amount of craft.
