CRYSTAL CHIME

Hermès

Arceau Samarcande Minute Repeater

Hermès places one of watchmaking's most cerebral complications behind a horse's head. The 38 mm white-gold Arceau frames a deep-blue dial made by Cristallerie Saint-Louis, with a sapphire-crystal Samarcande horse revealing selected sections of the movement below. Activate the minute repeater and calibre H1927 sounds the hours, quarters and minutes through tiny hammers and a gong. The automatic micro-rotor movement contains 339 components yet measures just 4.95 mm thick. It is grand complication watchmaking filtered through glassmaking, equestrian design and characteristic Hermès restraint.

BLUE ARCHITECTURE

Breguet

Tradition Seconde Rétrograde 7037

Breguet takes architecture inspired by its eighteenth-century subscription watches and gives it a contemporary blue treatment. Inside the fluted 38 mm white-gold case, ALD-treated bridges and mainplate sit exposed around a white Grand Feu enamel time display. At ten o'clock, the seconds hand crosses its arc before snapping instantly back to zero. Calibre 505 SR adds a hand-guilloché barrel cover, silicon hairspring and platinum oscillating weight. Finished on blue rubber, it respects tradition without treating it like museum property.
