Romancing the Stone

The stone has always been at the heart of Cartier—its soul and sensibility. It is these stones that have lent the Maison its distinct personality through their shapes, colours, history and symbolism. Therefore, it's only fitting that Cartier's new High Jewellery collection pay homage to these gemstones, which are both muse and motif for the designers. The Haryma is a stunning necklace in yellow gold, festooned with topazes, garnets, emeralds, onyx, and yellow and orange diamonds for company. If the Panther is the undisputed queen of Cartier fauna, the tiger is no lesser feline. To celebrate this worthy companion, the marque's jewellers have assembled five exceptional imperial topazes weighing 28.04 carats, as well as garnets and white, yellow, and orange diamonds. Their intense colour as well the staircase arrangement of the topazes creates a dynamic effect, which is strikingly realistic, as if the big cat is on the prowl. On the "pixelated" chain, custom-cut onyx stones echo the pattern of the tiger's coat, lending both visual continuity and drama to the design aesthetic.
