SHUTTERSTOCK

Mahadev Temple in Tambdi Surla

Located in a small clearing in the forest at the foothills of the scenic mountain pass, Anmod Ghat, this 12th-century Mahadev Temple at Tambdi Surla was built by the Kadamba dynasty and is the only surviving specimen of the Kadamba-Yadava architecture. The temple gets its name from the red (Tambdi) soil and rocks present around it and the Surla River flowing near the temple. The temple is a nirandhara (no pradakshina path or circumambulation) temple facing east and is also known for its slanting roof and 10 pillars in Mukhamandapa. The temple is an Archaeological Survey of India (ASI)-protected monument.

Where: Near Bhagwan Mahavir Wildlife Sanctuary, Tambdi Surla, Sanguem, South Goa

Main event: Mahashivratri (usually held in February)

