

POSTCARD FROM ASSAM

After experiencing the magic at The Postcard in the Durrung Tea Estate in Assam, we come away believing that tea tourism should be every traveller's cuppa

PRIYA PATHIYAN

As I watch the mist laze on the tips of the tea plants in the morning, I'm starting to enjoy my plantation-owner era. The Assam tea plant I'm waxing lyrical about is apparently a variety of tea bush, Camellia sinensis var. assamica, known for its broad leaves, strong malty flavour and high yield, making it a staple for robust black teas. On cue, an elaborate tasting presented by connoisseur Kaushik Kumar Choudhury unfolds later in the day, where he not only shares tea knowhow but also conducts a Gongfu tea ceremony, so I can do a flight
