Tea tourism is brewing gently in Assam. The Amchong Tea Estate, one of Assam's largest, has been around in Kamrup, near Guwahati, since 1958. It is now tempting travellers with interiors that draw from the undulating contours of a layered tea garden and natural textures, a factory viewing gallery, hands-on tea blending zones, ATV and jeep explorations of the estate, a dedicated tea bar with infusion-based menus and their tea-centric restaurant, Steep House. At Banyan Grove, inside the Gatoonga Tea Estate near Jorhat, you can stay in a heritage bungalow that was the erstwhile residence of the estate manager, while at the Kaziranga Golf Resort, you not only luxuriate in the beautifully restored Burra Sahib's Bungalow and indulge in tea estate tours, but also enjoy the planters' life by teeing off at the nine-hole 36 par golf course.

The tea experiences in Durrung, Assam, rival those that I've experienced in Darjeeling in West Bengal. Considering that Assam is one of the earliest places in the world where tea was cultivated, it is a region where more such 'tea resorts' could flourish and help to attract a bigger tourist footprint. The fact that hotelier Kapil Chopra has identified this and brought his luxury brand to the region in the form of The Postcard in the Durrung Tea Estate in Tezpur speaks volumes of the potential for tea tourism in the state. He observes, "Assam is a land of breathtaking landscapes, rich cultural traditions and an unmatched legacy of tea. The Northeast has long been
