

VERDANT VISTAS
(clockwise from left) Wide deck opens into the courtyard; a living space; the dry kitchen with teak wood cabinetry; foyer with dual-toned Kota stone flooring; daughter's bedroom overlooking the golf course

FACT FILE

Project Name
Sandstone House
Location Bidadi, Bangalore
Typology
Residential, Courtyard house
Area 7,800 sq ft
Design Firm
4Brick Studio
Architect and Interior Designer
Vandana Taluru
Landscape
3FoldDesign

Dialogue of Material and Heritage

Throughout the interiors, the dialogue between historical artifact and modern architecture is one of constant reciprocity. The living rooms are deliberately kept free of televisions to foster genuine human connection. Instead, the surfaces are animated with fragments of a pre-independence wooden chariot and weathered wooden printing blocks that layer the walls with texture and narrative. These cultural pieces temper the natural austerity of the stone and lime plaster. This design language extends into the master bedroom, where an open 200-year-old wooden chest reminiscent of 19th-century Lahore sits gracefully. This intimacy of lived heritage ensures that history is felt during daily rhythms, allowing the design to coalesce into an immersive environment.

Courtyard as a Living Heart

The home is physically and spiritually bound by a massive central void that channels light, ventilation and circulation. The ground floor unfolds seamlessly around this courtyard, with the main living room, dining area and open kitchen embracing the opening, while the formal living room and foyer act as protective thresholds. This two-story puncture rises upward to hold two bedrooms, a bonsai terrace garden and an inward-looking amphitheatre. The stepped seating of the amphitheatre culminates as a wall to create a vibrant, living green backdrop visible from the ground floor. Clad in hand-slit quartz sandstone, the courtyard walls mirror the exterior, while a venerable Thanjavur painting presides from the gallery above to watch over the home.

Ultimately, the residence breathes through the profound calm emanating from its simple, enduring design. The refined interior finishes serve as an open canvas for family stories to unfold over generations. By allowing art, stone and architecture to converge naturally, we created a layered presence that remains entirely unassuming yet deeply rewarding for its inhabitants.