

Rock N' Roll

Why a stack of gravity-defying stones is the ultimate bright idea for your living room

By RIDHI KALE

There is a fine line between a curated home and a geology exhibition. But Ashni's founder, Priti Mehta's new collection, Pashaan, walks it with luminous grace. Inspired by the contemplative Zen gardens, these rustic floor lamps look like a stack of river pebbles magically defying gravity. The secret to their organic charm? The brand bypasses standard mass-market plastics for a tactile cocktail of handmade forms wrapped in coffee-dyed banana paper, proving that sustainable design can have a seriously sophisticated edge. For a brand that started 13 years ago simply because the Mehta couldn't find a decent, eco-friendly lamp to impress visiting Japanese guests, this is a triumphant full-circle moment. Our advice, light up and let the compliments roll in.
