The Material Edit

Here's why high performance fabrics that look and feel good, are the need of the hour

By MANDEEP N. HOUSEGO

Homes have always been lived in, but our expectations of what materials should offer are changing. We want textiles that can withstand everyday use while still bringing softness, character and depth to a space. For me, this makes the conversation around performance fabrics an interesting one. It is not simply about making a textile stronger or easier to maintain. It is about understanding what a material needs to do, while retaining the texture, character, and tactility that give it meaning within a space.

Mandeep N. Housego, the Creative Director at Shades of India, leads design across the brand's apparel, home textile and bespoke interior collections. Her work reimagines textile as a defining element of contemporary living, blending handcraft traditions with a refined, timeless aesthetic www.shadesofindia.com

