

In the middle of Abids, where Hyderabad's old city moves at its own relentless pace, we were faced with a distinct urban challenge: how do you design a sanctuary surrounded by noise, density, and tightly packed traffic? Our answer was Crimson House, a 4,000 sq ft residence imagined almost as a pause within the chaos. Turning entirely inward, this home creates an immediate sense of calm the moment you cross the threshold, trading the frantic energy of the streets for a quiet, monastic breath of air.

DESIGNED TO STAND OUT
(clockwise from top) The intimate family lounge; a playful bedroom defined by saturated blue; the double-height living room with its fluid suspended installation; a bedroom wrapped in deep charcoal
