the field. Currently, TISS SoSW Mumbai has 300 fieldwork partners across the country—from state government departments and civil society organisations to non-governmental organisations and communities—working to make an impact.

5 TISS holds credence among various stakeholders, including the government and judiciary. The Bombay High Court recently praised its report on the Mumbai Coastal Road Project (South), which examined the impact on fisherfolk, while its professor, Dr Pekham Basu, was appointed to a Supreme Court committee investigating a POCSO-related matter. Additionally, its Field Action Projects, such as the Special Cell for Women initiative, run in collaboration with the Mumbai Police, place and train social workers within the police system to provide psychosocial-legal support to women facing violence. The model has since been replicated in several states.

STUDENTSPEAK

"Few institutes offer social welfare administration, but TISS stands out by teaching CSR skills and related regulations for corporate setups. Its true edge lies in its inclusivity and diversity"

HARSH SINGH
MSW, Children and Family, 2nd year

GURUSPEAK

"At TISS, many find a purpose in life. The new generation of social work aspirants are looking for ways to get involved in issues like environmental sustainability and mental health, and use technology to address the problem"

BIPIN JOJO
Dean, School of Social Work, TISS, Mumbai
