MEMORY | REMAINS

Through works by Krishen Khanna and Prabhakar Kolte, the exhibition revisits Indian modernism as an evolving dialogue. Juxtaposing Khanna's figurative reflections on everyday life shaped by Partition and migration with Kolte's meditative abstractions, the show foregrounds memory and lived experience as continuing concerns.

KHADI, A CANVAS

Bringing together handwoven khadi sarees, chromolithographs, printing stones and weaving tools, the exhibition reflects on the shared cultural legacy of Raja Ravi Varma and Mahatma Gandhi. Anchored by 18 sarees reinterpreting Varma's iconography, the show examines accessibility, self-sufficiency and circulation within India's visual imagination.

ONCE UPON A SCULPTOR

An exhibition of sculptures by K.S. Radhakrishnan, Once Upon a Sculptor traces decades of artistic evolution. Bringing together around 25 works, it follows Radhakrishnan's journey from early expressive forms to the iconic Maiya and Musui figures that define his mature practice. Known for their emotional intensity and philosophical depth, these recurring forms reveal shifting states of being.

Brobdingnag Paradox

Pratap Morey's third solo exhibition at Tarq—and his first since 2019—reflects on Mumbai's relentless construction and spatial compression. Through monumental photographic collages, Morey miniaturises vast structures using hand-cut elements scaled to his palm, playing with perception and repetition. Drawing on sustained site visits, the works echo urban spectacle and psychological restlessness, offering a layered meditation on scale, illusion and metropolitan life.

DIVINE COLOR: Hindu Prints from Modern Bengal

The exhibition explores how 19th-century lithography transformed devotional imagery and popular culture. Focusing on vibrant prints produced in colonial Calcutta, it traces how mass-produced images of Hindu deities reshaped worship, aesthetics and political thought. Featuring over 100 objects, including 39 rare lithographs from the museum's collection, the show highlights the powerful circulation of print in modern South Asia.
