TWO YEARS, ONE VISION

Chhattisgarh Emerges as India's Growth Engine

Development, Trust and Security—A New Governance Narrative

As the Vishnu Deo Sai-led government completes two years in Chhattisgarh, the milestone marks more than administrative continuity—it reflects a decisive shift in governance philosophy. These two years have been about restoring trust, strengthening security, and accelerating development with an inclusive, future-oriented approach.

Aligned with the national vision of Viksit Bharat, Chhattisgarh today is scripting its own growth narrative—one that combines economic momentum with social justice, infrastructure expansion with environmental balance, and internal security with democratic empowerment.

From Conflict to Confidence: A Turning Point in Internal Security

For decades, Maoism posed the single biggest obstacle to Chhattisgarh's progress. Entire regions—especially Bastar and parts of Surguja—remained trapped in a cycle of violence, fear and underdevelopment. Over the last two years, however, the situation has undergone a fundamental transformation.

Under Chief Minister Vishnu Deo Sai's leadership, the state adopted a clear doctrine: security and development must move together. While security forces intensified operations against extremist networks, governance simultaneously reached areas that had long remained outside the administrative mainstream.

Incidents of violence have sharply declined. Roads, schools and health centres that once faced repeated disruption are now operational. Large numbers of former Maoists have surrendered and rejoined civilian life, indicating a decisive weakening of extremist influence.

'Niyad Nella Nar': Governance at the Doorstep

A cornerstone of this transformation is the 'Niyad Nella Nar' programme, under which welfare schemes and public services are delivered directly to remote villages through security-linked governance outreach.

With 69 security camps now operational in previously inaccessible areas, over 397 villages are receiving benefits related to healthcare, education, ration distribution, housing and livelihood support. The programme has bridged the trust deficit between the state and citizens, reinforcing the idea that governance—not fear—defines the future.

Cultural and sporting initiatives such as the Bastar Olympics and Bastar Pandum have further helped reclaim public spaces, giving local youth platforms for expression, pride and participation. Bastar is no longer viewed merely through the lens of conflict; it is increasingly seen as a region of opportunity.

Good Governance as a System, Not a Slogan

The Sai government has focused on making governance measurable, transparent and accountable. The establishment of the Department of Good Governance and Convergence reflects an institutional commitment to outcome-based administration.

At the state secretariat, biometric attendance for officers has introduced discipline and punctuality, reinforcing a results-driven work culture. Digital monitoring, time-bound service delivery and convergence of schemes have improved efficiency across departments.

A defining moment in the state's democratic journey came with the inauguration of the new Chhattisgarh Legislative Assembly building in Nava Raipur by Prime Minister Narendra Modi. The complex symbolises modern governance, constitutional values and the state's confidence in its future.

Investment, Industry and Infrastructure: A Growth Multiplier

Chhattisgarh's renewed focus on economic growth is reflected in the strong investment response it has received. Over the last two years, the state has attracted investment proposals exceeding ₹7.90 crore, positioning it as one of India's emerging industrial destinations.

The new Industrial Policy prioritises sunrise sectors such as defence manufacturing, information technology, artificial intelligence, green energy and tourism. Special incentives, fast-track clearances

