and affordable land are being offered—particularly in Bastar and Surguja—to promote balanced regional development.

Tourism has been accorded industry status, supported by homestay policies and eco-tourism initiatives, opening new livelihood opportunities for tribal and rural communities while preserving ecological integrity.

Agriculture: Strengthening the Rural Economy

Agriculture remains the backbone of Chhattisgarh's economy, and paddy procurement is its most critical pillar. Under the Modi Guarantee, farmers in the state receive ₹3,100 per quintal, the highest minimum support price for paddy in the country.

More than 2,379 procurement centres ensure smooth operations, while digital registration and timely payments have enhanced transparency. Over more than ₹1.25 lakh crore has already been transferred directly to farmers' accounts, boosting rural purchasing power and revitalising local markets.

The ripple effect is visible—from increased farm investments to record tractor sales—demonstrating how agricultural prosperity drives overall economic growth.

Welfare with Dignity: Human-Centric Development

The Sai government's development model places people at the centre. Through the Jal Jeevan Mission, clean drinking water has reached over 40 lakh households, significantly improving public health outcomes.

Under Pradhan Mantri Awas Yojana, more than 26 lakh homes have been sanctioned, offering security and dignity to families across rural and urban areas.

The Mahtari Vandan Yojana has emerged as a transformative initiative for women's empowerment, providing ₹1,000 per month to over 70 lakh women. With over ₹14,306 crore already disbursed, the scheme has strengthened household economies and enhanced women's decision-making power.

Healthcare access has expanded dramatically, with 98 per cent of the population covered under Ayushman Bharat, ensuring financial protection against medical emergencies.

Education, Skills and Youth Aspirations

Recognising that Chhattisgarh's future rests with its youth, the government has invested heavily in education and skill development. New schools, ITIs and colleges are being complemented by targeted skill training in tourism, automobile services, aviation, IT and green technologies—especially in tribal regions.

These initiatives are equipping young people with employable skills, linking education with industry demand and entrepreneurship.

Towards a Sustainable, Inclusive Future

Two years into its tenure, the Vishnu Deo Sai government has laid a strong foundation for the next decade. The convergence of security, development, welfare and governance has reshaped Chhattisgarh's trajectory—from a state once defined by challenges to one increasingly recognised for stability and opportunity.

Today, Chhattisgarh's growth is visible not just in infrastructure or investment figures, but in farmer prosperity, tribal empowerment, women's independence and youth confidence.

As the state moves forward, its journey reflects a broader national promise: that inclusive growth, when guided by firm leadership and people-centric governance, can transform even the most complex regions into engines of progress.
