

for nuance and understanding the soul of a scent – qualities that have long defined Sacheerome's identity.

As he took the reins, Manoj steered Sacheerome through its most foundational years. He expanded the company's portfolio, strengthened manufacturing capabilities, and built a culture that valued innovation, creativity, and long-term relationships. Under his leadership, Sacheerome evolved from an Indian family-run enterprise into a respected name in the global fragrance and flavour industry.

But perhaps Manoj's most enduring contribution lies in the way he made perfumery part of Dhruv's childhood, which enabled him to understand the science that sits quietly behind every note. Those early moments planted the seeds of curiosity and commitment in Dhruv.

A New Voice Emerges: Dhruv's Early Steps

As a young boy, Dhruv's relationship with perfumery began by spending many afternoons in the lab, watching his father and perfumers at work, immersed in the fascinating world of fragrances and flavours. What began as a fascination became an obsession with understanding not just the fragrance itself, but everything around it- the art, chemistry, consumer behaviour, and business dynamics.

He followed this passion academically, pursuing Chemistry with business and management at the University of Manchester and later a postgraduate management programme at the Indian School of Business. But when Dhruv formally joined Sacheerome in 2010, his father ensured that his foundation was built the same way the company was—layer by layer.

He worked across Quality Control, Perfume Development, Production, Business Development, and Sales, learning the business from the inside out. These formative years gave him a deep appreciation for the systems his father had built and also the areas the next generation could enhance.

A Legacy of Technology: Built by Manoj, Strengthened for the Future

For decades, Manoj and his team have been the driving force behind Sacheerome's evolution, building a strong technological backbone long before the industry could fully embrace automation and advanced technologies. Their relentless commitment to research and innovation laid the foundation for advanced formulation techniques, state-of-the-art processes, and a culture of continuous improvement.

When Dhruv stepped in, he aligned himself with the long-established vision & mission shaped by Manoj: elevating Sacheerome to global benchmarks through executional excellence, scalable operations, scientific rigour, and smarter manufacturing. His contribution added momentum to an already strong technical foundation.

Under Manoj's leadership and with Dhruv strengthening the effort, Sacheerome accelerated its transformation, including the launch of an advanced automated and robotic fragrance manufacturing plant in 2015.

Manoj's creative mastery, combined with the team's decades-long R&D focus, has also led to several breakthroughs, such as Sach/Odocon (the cutting-edge malodour neutralisation) and Sach/Maxicap & Sach/Neocap (the next-generation microencapsulation systems for enhanced fragrance retention across fabric care, cosmetics, textiles, rubber and plastics).

From a modest perfumery lab to automated manufacturing and advanced encapsulation technologies, the third-generation legacy of Manoj Arora, carried forward by Dhruv Arora, embodies the evolution of Indian fragrance and flavour expertise. This feature explores how their shared vision is shaping a future-ready Sacheerome - where science, creativity, and legacy converge to create global impact across the FMCG industry

Building the Future: A New Home for a Growing Legacy

Today, Sacheerome operates in several international markets, including Europe, Southeast Asia, and the Gulf. The next big chapter is unfolding with an around 300,000 sq. ft. LEED Platinum–certified facility at YEIDA—Sacheerome's future headquarters. There are also plans to nurture emerging talent through a world-class fragrance and flavour institute.

Sacheerome's journey is a testament to what happens when legacy is not just preserved but evolved. In the case of Manoj and Dhruv Arora, it is a story that spans across two generations. And their legacy only continues to grow stronger.