

When the high Himalayan regions wrap themselves in a blanket of snow, many destinations across the state welcome travelers with a special winter tourism season. Winter Char Dham worship, snow-covered meadows (bugyals), thrilling trekking trails, water sports, homestays in traditional villages, and cultural festivals—every experience makes this journey truly unforgettable.

This journey is not just a gift of spiritual peace and natural beauty, but also a source of empowerment for local communities, giving new strength to livelihoods, homestays, and rural tourism—creating new pathways for regional prosperity.
