SOCIAL WELFARE, INCLUSIVE GOVERNANCE MARK ONE YEAR OF SAINI GOVT

75 percent of promises kept and worked upon in one-fifth of tenure

Completion of one year in office--- which constitutes one-fifth of the tenure of any democratically elected government---is time for stock-taking, as well as for resolve-making. It is time for the government to look over the shoulders to appraise what all has been done, and draw a roadmap for the remainder of the term. More often than not, the manifesto of the party in power serves as a ready gauge for measuring the performance.

Going by this yardstick, the Nayab Singh Saini Government, which completed one year in office on October 17, 2025, can draw a deep breath of satisfaction. In the first 12 months, it has not only succeeded in fulfilling 54 out of the 217 promises made to the people in the run-up to the 2024 Assembly elections, but also initiated action on others. The arch of these covers such departments as involve public dealing, farmers and social welfare.

Unlike other politicians who treat promises
