

formation of Transgender Welfare Board; extension of the disability pensions to 10 additional categories benefiting 32,000 persons; and hike in marriage shagun amount, reflect the commitment of the Saini Government to inclusive development. The historic step of granting ownership rights to such residents who have been living on panchayati land for over 20 years, has provided security to thousands of families.

Initiatives for women's empowerment have created pathways for economic independence. More than 2.13 lakh women have achieved "Lakhpati Didi" status and thousands of them are receiving training in drone operations, insurance services, and entrepreneurship. The focus on employee welfare, with enhanced insurance coverage, more days of leave, increased gratuity limits, and service security for contractual workers, shows how much the administration cares for the staff that serves the public.

Digital governance initiatives, including the integration of 26 revenue services on a single portal, scanning and uploading of nearly 40 crore revenue record pages, and comprehensive GIS mapping of 44,212 square kilometres, have brought unprecedented transparency and accessibility to government services. The e-Land Portal, e-Kharid application, and various online systems have eliminated middlemen and reduced corruption.

Besides, several other initiatives have been taken to inject the system with systemic reforms aimed at bringing smiles on the face of the people, and making the state a talking point at the national forum.

The Saini administration plays a true friend of farmers. All avenues are being tapped to make farming a profitable proposition. All the 24 notified crops are now procured at MSP and payment is made to farmers within 48 hours
