

Haryana empowers panchayats with greater autonomy and funding, enabling sarpanches to execute projects worth ₹21 lakh without e-tendering while expanding women's and backward classes' representation in rural governance passing through fields, is now calculated at 200% of the market rates.

To ensure better coordination, inter-zila parishads have been formed, bringing together representatives from zila parishads and panchayat institutions to jointly plan development strategies.

With digital governance tools, enhanced financial devolution and historic representation for women and backward classes, Haryana's Panchayati Raj reforms mark a transformative chapter in the state's rural development journey, empowering villages to become true engines of inclusive growth.

BETI BACHAO-BETI PADHAO CAMPAIGN

Under the Beti Bachao-Beti Padhao campaign, all women sarpanches across the state have been designated as village ambassadors, strengthening the movement for women's empowerment and gender equality at the grassroots level. In a major infrastructure initiative, streetlights have been installed in 705 villages, enhancing safety and visibility in the state's most populous rural areas. In order to promote transparency and digital efficiency, the state launched the e-Gram Swaraj Portal on April 24, 2020 as a part of the National e-Governance Plan. The platform enables real-time monitoring of grants and expenditures by PRIs. Currently, over 99% of gram panchayats are integrated into the system, with more than ₹1,556 crore spanning 1.43 lakh transactions processed online in 2024–25.

The Haryana Rural Development Fund (HRDF) Board has sanctioned ₹5,167.27 crore since 2014 for rural infrastructure, including roads, drains, playgrounds, sanitation works, and COVID-19 relief initiatives. Additionally, schemes such as the Mukhyamantri Gramin Awas Yojana aims to provide 100-square-yard plots to landless villagers, while the Haryana Swarn Jayanti Mahagram Yojana focuses on installing sewerage systems in large villages with population exceeding 10,000.
