

THE CHANGEMAKERS

Building The Foundation For Viksit Bharat @2047

As India Today marks half a century of bearing witness to the nation's unfolding journey, this landmark anniversary issue casts its gaze toward the horizon, toward the promise of Viksit Bharat @2047. This vision is not being forged through mere rhetoric, but through the quiet determination of those who build, heal, teach, and serve. The Change Makers: Building The Foundation For Viksit Bharat @2047 celebrates individuals whose life's work embodies a profound belief in India's tomorrow.

Rajinder Gupta of the Trident Group exemplifies enterprise with a conscience. His remarkable journey demonstrates how industry can be a force for collective upliftment, creating dignified employment, strengthening the economic fabric of entire regions, and remaining deeply rooted in the communities it serves. Trident's impressive scale is matched only by its steadfast commitment to social equity and environmental stewardship.

For decades, Onkar Singh Pahwa of Avon Cycles has been quietly democratizing mobility across India. By making bicycles accessible and affordable, he has opened pathways to livelihoods, education, and independence for millions in cities, towns, and villages alike. His work illustrates how thoughtful manufacturing can become an engine of inclusive prosperity.

Saravdeep Singh Lally of Lally Motors embodies the transformative power of regional entrepreneurship. Through disciplined leadership, he has evolved a cherished family enterprise into a thriving professional automotive network, creating opportunities, elevating service standards, and strengthening economic vitality across communities.

The health of a nation rests upon the shoulders of those who heal. Dr H K Bali, a distinguished interventional cardiologist, Dr Harinder Singh Bedi, an accomplished cardiovascular surgeon, and Dr Majid Ahmed Talikoti, a dedicated oncologist, have devoted their lives to bringing world-class medical care within reach of those who need it most. Their impact extends far beyond the operating theater, into training the next generation, championing early diagnosis, and empowering patients with knowledge. Complementing this modern medical excellence is Mohit Sardana of Asli Ayurveda, who bridges ancient wisdom with contemporary wellness needs. Together, these guardians of health remind us that a developed India must first be a healthy India, where prevention, timely intervention, and informed choices become fundamental rights, not privileges.

Education is the bedrock upon which every dream is built. Sanjeev Kumar Vasal of Vasal Education Group has dedicated himself to creating learning spaces where young minds don't just absorb knowledge, but flourish. His sustained investment in robust infrastructure and progressive pedagogy reflects a deep understanding: that preparing students for tomorrow's world requires vision today.

These remarkable individuals work in different spheres, yet they are united by something deeper: an unshakeable commitment to building institutions that will outlast them, systems that will serve generations yet unborn. As India Today completes five decades of storytelling, their journeys illuminate an essential truth. The path to Viksit Bharat @2047 is not paved with grand gestures alone, but with the steady accumulation of purposeful actions, one enterprise, one patient, one student, one community at a time.

This is how nations are truly built. This is how dreams become destiny.
