

"Anyone can sell a car," Saravdeep says. "The real challenge is ensuring that every customer who walks in feels seen, respected and valued."

serve every kind of customer need. With over 1,450 employees driving operations, the group records a formidable INR 800 crore annual turnover, selling approximately 8000 new and used cars a year.

On the technology front, the family's younger son Ripandeep Singh Lally, a Computing graduate from Newcastle, UK, drives the Group's digital backbone. From CRM systems to social engagement and IT operations, his work ensures that the company stays agile and future-ready in an industry being reshaped by tech.

This dynamic between passion and innovation, with Punjab roots and global polish, is what defines the Group's approach. Yet, the heart of Lally Motors beats in its relationships.

Saravdeep, an alumnus of The Lawrence School, Sanawar, says the school taught him to treat everyone equally. "Each person in our company, from the one managing the showroom to the one managing the paperwork, plays a crucial role. It's not just about selling cars; it's about fostering relationships."

That human connection has inspired incredible stories. One that stands out for the Lallys is a father who bought a Honda when his daughter was born. After two decades of buying cars from them, he once again returned to the same Lally Motors dealership to buy his daughter her first car when she was about to join college.

"It still touches my heart when someone walks up after 20 years just to say thank you. Knowing that what we built brought joy to their lives, is the real success to me," Saravdeep shares a rare moment where success sounds emotional.
