PURPOSE before PROFIT

MOHIT SARDANA and ASLI AYURVEDA

In a wellness industry driven by trends, Mohit Sardana stands for intention. Founder of ASLI Ayurveda, he is committed to restoring the authenticity of India's ancient science through disciplined research, ethical manufacturing and conscious leadership. A serial entrepreneur, Sardana has also been closely associated with the growth of India's direct selling industry, addressing millions and contributing to a transformational phase in the sector.

A charming presence with a gentle glow on his face, Mohit Sardana carries a smile that instantly puts people at ease. His voice, measured and reassuring, reflects years of inner work and clarity of intent. A compelling orator, he speaks with equal ease about ancient Sanskrit texts and modern pharmaceutical protocols. For him, ASLI Ayurveda is not a brand narrative. It is a responsibility.

"From the very beginning, my intention was clear. I did not want to build another Ayurvedic company. I wanted to create something that felt authentic the moment one stepped into it," he says.

That intention finds tangible expression at ASLI Ayurveda's manufacturing facility in Taraori near Karnal, Haryana. Spread across one lakh square feet, the unit is both a modern pharmaceutical plant and a contemplative space. Raw materials are sourced from across the country and handled with meticulous care. WHO-GMP norms are followed with the same rigour seen in allopathic manufacturing, supported by HVAC-controlled environments and stringent global compliance.

"Our ambience had to speak for itself," he explains. "When the environment carries discipline, purity and reverence, the products naturally reflect that quality."

The facility is ZED Gold certified, reflecting a zero defect, zero effect approach that prioritises purity, sustainability and operational excellence. Eco conscious practices are embedded into daily operations, with recycling systems in place and a conscious effort to eliminate plastic.

ASLI Ayurveda today operates in over 20 countries across the United States and Europe. Since 2023, the company has been functioning as a trusted third party manufacturer for domestic and international brands and startups. It is now preparing to enter the direct to consumer space, bringing ASLI Ayurveda directly to households.

Senior executives from international conglomerates have visited the facility, exploring large scale investments in Ayurveda. Conversations are underway to build Ayurveda driven health lounges in India's high street ecosystem. Sardana shares, "Over the last one year, several large Indian and global conglomerates have explored strategic collaborations with ASLI Ayurveda." Sardana, however, remains clear that partnerships must be driven by shared purpose and value creation rather than valuation alone.

Scripture to Science

What truly distinguishes ASLI Ayurveda is its refusal to separate tradition from technology. Ancient Ayurvedic scriptures are studied alongside modern research methodologies. Scholars, biotechnologists, M Pharma professionals and food technologists work together under one roof, translating classical formulations into globally acceptable, scientifically validated products.
