Q+A

A ROYAL LEGACY

Maharaja Sawai Padmanabh Singh of Jaipur, Co-founder, Jaipur Centre for Art, on their latest exhibition*

Q. What is the inspiration behind Annotations on Colour?

Jaipur has lived with colour as a civic identity for centuries. Colour here is not decorative; it shapes atmosphere, perception, even behaviour. Annotations on Colour began like that. We wanted to explore colour not as an ornament or symbol, but as a force, something that unfolds through light, space and the viewer's movement.

Q. Jaipur will celebrate its tercentenary next year. What is the City Palace Museum planning?

Through exhibitions, research and public programming at the City Palace Museum, we aim to honour Jaipur's layered past and invite dialogue about sustainability, innovation and the role of culture.

Q. What are the challenges involved in carrying the great Jaipur legacy forward?

It is both a privilege and a responsibility. The challenge lies in balancing new ideas and contemporary experiences while remaining rooted in the city's historical and cultural foundations. Our role is to push boundaries thoughtfully.

Q. Tell us more about JCA's plans for the future.

We see JCA as a catalyst for a larger cultural ecosystem in Jaipur. We hope that its presence encourages more artists to live and work here, and that, over time, we see a flourishing network of galleries and creative spaces across the city.

*—with Neha Kirpal