DAISY CHITTILAPILLY

PRESIDENT, CISCO INDIA AND SOUTH ASIA

With 17 years at Cisco, Daisy Chittilapilly has played a key role in India's digital transformation, leading Cisco India and South Asia. She is currently helping Indian enterprises move AI from pilots to secure, scaled deployment, while building the talent and infrastructure needed for that transition. In 2026, she launched Cisco's AI and Cybersecurity Technology Hub with IIT Delhi and backed efforts to skill 2.7 million Indians in AI and cybersecurity by 2028, reinforcing her focus on India's technology and talent ecosystem.

PHOTO BY SELVAPRAKASH LAKSHMANAN

DEVITA SARAF

FOUNDER & CEO, VU TELEVISIONS

Devita Saraf saw a market for premium televisions and pursued it. She started Vu Group at a time when the game was dominated by the likes of Samsung and LG. Saraf likes bringing luxury to the technology industry and over time, Vu has grown to become a consumer electronics group. Apart from India, the Vu brand also sells in the Middle East and Africa. In many ways, Saraf has taken an unorthodox bet and met with success.

PHOTO BY HARDIK CHHABRA

DEVINA MEHRA

FOUNDER, CHAIRPERSON & MD, FIRST GLOBAL

Devina Mehra has been one of the most respected names when it comes to investing. She leads asset management company First Global—a firm she started three decades ago after leaving Citibank. First Global started as a securities firm and investment bank before transforming into a quantitative asset manager. Mehra spearheaded the company's global foray from around 1999-2000 making it the first Asian (ex-Japan) member of the London Stock Exchange. Mehra is a gold medalist from Lucknow University and IIM Ahmedabad and her company is known not just for its India research, but the ability to also identify major changes in global markets.

PHOTO BY MILIND SHELTE