

GEETIKA MEHTA
MANAGING DIRECTOR, NIVEA INDIA

Geetika Mehta has headed Nivea India, a company with a presence in skin and personal care, for almost three years. Prior to this she ran Hershey's India for two years, though it was at Hindustan Unilever where she really cut her teeth. An eighteen-year innings saw her work in businesses as diverse as personal products, foods, home, and hygiene. At Nivea, with its global pedigree, there is a chance to really grow in the Indian market.

GUNJAN SONI
COUNTRY MANAGING DIRECTOR, YOUTUBE INDIA

Having joined YouTube India in 2025 after leadership roles at ZALORA, Myntra, Star India, and McKinsey, Gunjan Soni is steering YouTube's India growth around creators, AI, commerce, and the country's expanding digital economy. Under her leadership, the platform is highlighting an ecosystem that contributed over ₹18,000 crore to India's GDP and supported 9,06,000 jobs in 2025. Soni is also championing AI skilling and creator monetisation, including 15,000 scholarships through a partnership with the government and IICT.

IPSITA DASGUPTA
SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT & MD, HP INDIA, BANGLADESH & SRI LANKA

Three years into leading HP India, Sri Lanka, and Bangladesh, Ipsita Dasgupta is shaping HP's India strategy around AI, manufacturing, and access to technology. She has championed a hybrid AI approach, combining hyperscale and edge computing, arguing that India's scale and diverse use cases demand locally relevant solutions. She is also driving domestic manufacturing and accessibility, including HP's India-first OmniPad launch. With PC penetration still below 25%, her focus extends to education, skilling, SMEs, and making computing more accessible across India.
