BACK WHEN SHE was in primary school, Priti Sureka had to write an essay about what she wanted to be when she grew up. "I didn't know there was a word like businesswoman, so I wrote I wanted to be a businessman," she laughs. That clarity was perhaps a result of the subconscious training she had received from her father R.S. Agarwal, co-founder of Kolkata-headquartered Emami. Agarwal would often start work early while she was getting ready to go to school and would discuss different aspects of the business with her. This eventually led her to joining the company in 1996, when she was just 24.

Thirty years later, Sureka is a Whole-time Director with the consumer goods company and has been credited with reviving and growing the flagship Boroplus brand, as well as acquiring Kesh King to foray into the haircare segment. In 2025, she was elected President of the Merchants' Chamber of Commerce and Industry, making her the first woman to hold this position in the MCCI's 125-year history.

However, it was not smooth sailing. "There was resistance from the extended family and complete non-acceptance in the office from execu-
