Carlos Bresser-Pereira, Sean W. Burges, Roland Clark, Carlos Cozendey, Sulamis Dain, Pedro Dallari, Markus Fraundorfer, David Fleischer, Camila Amorim Jardim, David Kupfer, Antônio Carlos Lessa, José Alfredo de Graça Lima, María Antonieta del T. Lins, Walter Ness, Edson de Oliveira Nunes, Amâncio J. de Oliveira, Janina Onuki, Alberto Pfieffer, Armando Castelar Pinheiro, Sybil Rhodes, Feliciano de Sá Guimarães, Laura Randall, the M. Raimunda dos Santos family, Bruno W. C. Saraiva, Miriam Saraiva, Ben Ross Schneider, Lourdes Sola, Oliver Stuenkel, María Hermínia Tavares, Matthew Taylor, Vera Thorstensen, Tullo Vigevani, and Kurt von Mettenheim. Indians and South Asianists who provided extremely useful guidance include John Echeverri-Gent, Surupa Gupta, John Harriss, and Aseema Sinha. For invaluable assistance in understanding South Africa, we thank Audie Klotz and Janis van de Westhuizen.

Roberts thanks President Jennifer Raab and Dean Andrew Polsky for travel and research support, in part through the Hunter College President's Fund and the Presidential Fund for Faculty Advancement, and her political science colleagues, especially Ken Erickson and Walter Volkomer. Roberts is also grateful to Columbia University for providing an invaluable intellectual and research environment, particularly the Saltzman Institute for War and Peace Studies and its director, Richard Betts, and Business Manager Ingrid Gerstmann, as well as the librarians at the Columbia Business School. She also thanks the leaders of the Harriman Institute, Alexander Cooley, Tim Frye, and Kimberly Marten, and many other Columbia colleagues, especially Jack Snyder, for their encouragement and support.

Armijo thanks the Instituto de Relações Internacionais, Universidade de São Paulo, Brazil, where she was a visiting professor in 2015 while conducting research for this book, and her stimulating colleagues and students at the School for International Studies at Simon Fraser University.

Katada appreciates the School of International Relations and Center for International Studies of University of Southern California, as well as the East-West Center in Washington, DC, for their generous funding and support of her research. Our heartfelt thanks go to our hardworking research assistants over the course of two years: Brandon Cheung, Logan Childers, Xinru Ma, Samuel D. Miller, Andrew Sherlock, Mingmin Yang, and Xinlin Zhao.